For a "Catechism of Irish Geography and Topography," we are indebted to the author, John H. Greene, Esq. It is a concise and yet complete compendium of the Geography of Ireland, and exceedingly valuable as a book of reference. No public or private library should be without a copy. The work is printed by Wm. Doyle, No. 73 West Third street.

BURGLARS ABOUT .- The town seems at present to be full of thieves and burglars, drawn here, no doubt, by the fact of the recent changes in the Police force. Whenever experienced officers retire, or are removed from the Pelice, thieves both from at home and abroad soon glean the tidings, and are realously at work in their vocation, well knewing that the chance of detection by green officers is slight indeed. Within the past three or four weeks, no less than five or six burglaries per night have been committed in this city. And in only one instance has there been an arrest made by the regular police—and that one only on suspicion. We hear almost daily, of personal conflicts with burglars by the inmates of the houses robbed, but the complaint is very general that a policeman never can be found until after the rascals have made heir escape.

Fool-Hardiness Rebuked.

We endorse every word of the following from the New York Times on the subject of that species of mania, which makes some men desire to do and others to see something horribly daring and unnatural. Our education will be better without that kind of French.

A FOOL AND HIS FEAT.—A being, probably an ape, but whose keepers call him by the rather human name of "Monsieur Blondin," it is publicly announced will walk on Thursday next across the chasm below Ningara Falls, upon a rope stretched from bank to bank for that purpose. The spot selected is half way between the Suspension Bridge and the Cata-ract, where the chasm is about a thousand feet wide, and the height above the water at which the rope is stretched is not far from two hun-dred feet. We believe that the Nisgara river runs at this point between two civilized coun-tries; and that there are a reasonable number of reasonably respectable Christian citizens living within hearing of the living within hearing of this outrageous pro clamation. If we are not mistaken in this belief, the gulf between M. Blondin's promise and his performance, be he man or monkey, will be considerably wider than the great chasm of the river itself.

Such reckless and aimless exposure of life as is here projected is simply horrible, be that life what it may. Thoughtless people, meaning no special harm, may promise themselves a sort of excitement in looking at a fellow-creature in deadly peril, and in shuddering through the moments of the indecent exhibition. This coarse sentiment would attract thousands to see a sentiment. thousands to see a man cross Niagara on a rope, as it would draw them to see a dog-fight or a bull-baiting. But the authorities on the spot owe it to themselves, to the community in which they live, and to the whole country, to kill this thing at once and decisively. New York has been sufficiently disgraced already by the senseless plaudits which urged that poor simpleton, Sam Patch, to leap to his death from the brow of the Genesee Falls, at Rochester, thirty years ago.

If M. Blondin is really a man, inflamed with a mad desire of throwing his life upon a tight-rope, let him retire to some secret gerge of the Himalaya and indulge his merbid passion without shocking the decencies of human society. If being a man, he is merely a mountebank bent on earning the money of unreflecting property by the state of reflecting people by this vile trifling with the sanctities of life, let him be arrested at once, before the noblest scenery of the New World is desecrated by a show of which savages might be ashamed.

WEATHER PREDICTIONS .- Mr. F. L. Capen, of Chicago, in a communication to the Press and Tribune, of that city, proposes to make accurate predictions of the weather for any length of time in advance. Having only prosecuted the subject about three years, however, he does not feel authorized to claim that he can predict weather with unerring accuracy without a year's additional observation, and further says:

This course will be regarded as no more than reasonable and prudent on the part of one who claims to have discovered the great fun-damental principles which underlie and con-trol the whole meteorological system or ma-chinery of the globe, by which man will be enabled easily to predict the new apparently capricious fluctuation of the weather with the utmost certainty and precision, for any locality between the tropics, and for any length of time in advance; and that, too, in the same manner that the astronomer has long been accustomed to announce an eclipse. In fact the weather can no longer be regarded as a matter of prophecy, but of scientific calculation; except, per-haps, until observation and statistics, so essential for the verification of all science, shall befull and conclusive as to leave little room for the exercise of the judgment which, perhaps, for the present, must come somewhat

It is unfortuate for some of us that Mr. Capen did not commence his observations one year sooner, for had we known the state of the weather a few days in advance, we would have taken our great coat along with us to Chicago the other day; and might have ordered a suit of "cool duck" for this "melting

TRIAL OF THE WINANS STEAMER.-A trial trip of this steamer was made on Saturday, in order to test the effect of the lengthening of order to test the effect of the lengthening of the vessel upon her speed. With the machi-nery making seventy revolutions per minute, the steamer made about twenty-one miles per hour, by measurement, which is highly satis-factory to her owners, the Messrs. Winans. The points added to the steamer are fourteen feet in length, increasing her length twenty-eight feet beyond the original design. These points are merely used for experimental purpoints are merely used for experimental pur-poses. They will be taken off when every-thing is ready, and two others, seventeen feet longer, put permanently in their places. The trip on Saturday showed plainly that the speed can be increased in reposition to the local becan be increased in proportion to the length of the points.

Suppose then the Winans "proportion the points" to the speed of 1,000 miles an hour!

GYMNASTICS IN THE BRITISH ARMY .- Orders have been given for introducing athletic games and gymnastic exercises in the British army. The idea is derived from the French. Zouaves are trained gymnasts, and are as agile as so many Ravels. Their exploits in scaling ramparts are almost incredible. They climb up over each other's backs, making a ladder of their bodies against the wall. The exercises are promotive of health as well as efficiency in the hour of action.

We have long been of the opinion that our Firemen should practice daily gymnactics in a way that would better prepare them for their duties. As a whole, Firemen are a clumsy set. Live and learn.

Twenty-nine years ago Chicago polled but thirty-two votes, and the majority of these were cast by French Canadians and halfbreeds.

From the political history of the town, as well as by the law of "increase and multiply," we judge the "French Canadians and halfbreeds" are now in the ascendancy, and have been so from the first.

The first hogshead of tobacco sent into market by the Cherokees, has just been recelled at St. Louis .- Ex. paper. The first fruits of civilization! The next step will be for the Cherokees to make and send to St. Louis drugged whisky. By this they will carn the reputation of having been fully Christianized!

The Royal Antiquarian Society of the North The Royal Antiquarian Society of the North, which was opened in Copeningen May 14, 1859, under the presidency of the King of Denmark, was attended by Dr. A. C. Hamlin of Bangor, who contributed an inscription found in the island of Monhegan, near the coast of Maine, and traced to the Normans, who were supposed to have visited the American coast in ancient times.

LAW REPORT.

June 29th, 1859. COOK'S TRIAL-SIXTH DAY-EIGHT JURORS wonn .- At half past nine o'clock, this morn ing, Judge Dickson took his seat on the Bench, and the examination of parties touching their qualifications to serve as Jurors was

One party from Columbia township, testified that he had formed an opinion from what he had read in the case, but had not expressed it and he held the opinion now, subject to what he should hear on the trial, taken in connec tion with the law as it might be laid down. Judge Dickson said that this man ought to be regarded as a competent Juror; but in view of the rule laid down by the Supreme Court he would have to be excluded.

J. H. Hebe, Constable of Delhi township, examined. He did not know anything of the case; heard it spoken of, and something had been read to him on the subject, but he forgot all about it. Judge Matthews-Do you know the name of the prisoner on trial?

Witness—Mr. Cook.
Counsel—Who did he kill—was it Mr. Be Witness-Yes, that's the man. (Laughter. Counsel-Kate Bereau was the name of the erson who was killed, and the circumstance took place on Lodge Alley. Did you hear anything of that case?

Witness—I think 'Squire Davis read a piece to me about it. The witness was challenged and set aside. Benj. B. Davis, of Delbi township, had read a portion of the testimony, but nothing suffient to form an opinion.

The counsel for the State and the prisone cepted him. Mr. Davis asked to be excused, and urged the pressure of his private business.

Court—We cannot excuse you on that ground. Mr. Davis—I would suggest also that I am a Justice of the Peace, and would desire to know whether a public officer has not the right to excuse himself?

Court-We know of no law authorizing you to excuse youself. The juror was then sworn. Two hundred and fifty persons have been examined, and eight jurors selected.

Supposed Insanity.—A young woman, about 19 years of age, of healthy appearance, was brought into the Probate Court this more was brought into the Probate Court was brought into the Probate Court was stating ing, the parties having her in charge stating that it was supposed she was insane. For about half an hour nothing could be obtained about half an hour nething could be obtained of her history. Her brother shortly afterwards came into Court, whon it appeared that this young woman had arrived in this city from Gormany, only a day or two since, expecting to find her lover in this city, and being disappointed, and also perplexed at the absence of her brother, who was at work in a factory on Fourth street, she became dejected, and took a notion into her head that she had been all notion into her head that she had been sold into slavery. She showed great emotion when her brother came into Court, wept and put her arms around his neck, and after some quiet conversation with him, she became composed, and went home with him.
